★★★★★ good antenna

Reviewer: thomas degroat from phillipsburg, NJ United States

i live 45 miles from philly and i got around 30 channels. it didn't get as many as my clearstream 2v gets (48) but for $29 dollars it was worth it. might try to combine it with another. this is an update. i hooked this up at a friend's house with a clear line of sight and he's getting 42 channels. haven't been able to get low vhf but still a good antenna and the price and small size make it a very good antenna.

★★★★★ Great Little Antenna!

February 25, 2015

Reviewer: Richard Prendergast from Germantown, TN United States

Bought this antenna because I was not satisfied with the indoor type. Glad I did. Pulls in all the channels I want. Transmitter towers are 14 to 17 miles away and they are all blasting in with no problem. I mounted it on the corner eave of my house on a 3 ft pole.

initially we propped it up against the outside door that points it in the right direction -- works great -- we actually have it up on the eave now -- works great -- saving tons of money with no cable bill -- WONDERFUL

I researched all of the best antenna brands for my area. I ordered the Stealthtenna 50 online for only $29.00 with no shipping costs, directly from Channel Master.
What a great buy.
It arrived in less than 5 days. I installed it on my roof today -it was really easy!
I already had the mast in place from my old antenna.
I went from 32 channels to over 60.
Impressive.

★★★★★ Seems to work fine

January 15, 2015

Reviewer: Anonymous Person from Regina, SK Canada

It really is light and I have it attached to the downpipe of the house so maybe 7 feet off the ground. I didn't want to climb on the roof! Weather has been good signal-wise so it has not really faced any big test but it catches the 4 channels here, one of which(Global) is way the other direction from the other 3 and maybe 30 miles away. So I am happy.
